

The bad news: ICE is terrorizing our communities.

There have been over one hundred seizures of immigrant community members throughout Connecticut in the past two weeks. More than half were in the diverse city of Danbury, where ICE appeared at school bus stops to grab parents as soon as their children were on the bus.

Most recently, here in New Haven, early on Friday morning, September 4th, ICE grabbed three people at Ella T Grasso Blvd and Edgewood Ave. and had a presence at Tweed New Haven Airport.

The good news: Connecticut Communities are mobilizing against ICE terror.

The ICE kidnappings in Danbury, Bridgeport, Milford, New Haven, throughout Connecticut, and across the United States are a key tool of the MAGA takeover of our country. They are using ICE to spread fear among everyone in our communities. This won't stop unless we, the people, make it stop.

Our communities are mobilizing to do just that. All of us need to join in this work however we can.

"We're doing a lot, but it's still not enough. We have volunteers mobilizing as early as 5:30 in the morning to try to document ICE presence, to try to be witness to what's going on. We have a helpline to try to field calls from families that are searching for missing relatives. We support people that are in post-detention, whether it's with grocery cards, giving people rides, picking up school supplies, ...and trying to connect them with legal assistance, as well... And we're working around the clock, because what happened last week was horrendous."

More than a thousand people marched in Danbury, Connecticut, on Wednesday, September 2nd, in protest. At least 60 businesses in the city also closed their doors that day for "A Day Without Immigrants" in support of the city's immigrant community. There were demonstrations held on Wednesday and again on Saturday, September 5th, at New Haven's City Hall, as well as at Tweed New Haven Airport on Sunday morning (today).

Silence is not an option.

Resist This Endless War.

Resist fascism now (before it's too late.)
